MAJOR RECENT ANNOUNCEMENTS

- The proposed Milford Wind Corridor project, a wind driven 200-megawatt power project, signed a power-purchase agreement to supply the city of Los Angeles with renewable wind power. Wind power will be generated by eighty 2.5-megawatt wind turbine generators will be transmitted to the Intermountain Power Project substation in Delta. The project will require approximately 36 miles of newly constructed access roads and turnaround areas. This project is headed by UPC Wind Management, LLC, a Massachusetts-based company that develops, owns and operates wind farms.¹
- Heritage Plastics, based in Weatherford, Texas, expanded with a new division in Milford to manufacture electrical conduit, utility duct and fittings for power, cable, Internet, telephone data and voice transmission lines. The 50,000-square-foot facility is located on 13 acres in the city's industrial park.²
- The Utah Bureau of Economic and Business Research released 2008 construction data showing that Beaver County was one of few areas in Utah to experience improvement in construction values. Total values are up 11% since last year.³
- The Utah State Tax Commission recently released 2008 fourth quarter gross taxable sales data. Beaver County had a 19% year-over increase in total sales. Most of the increase is due to an increase in activity in the mining industry.⁴
- Raser Technologies, Inc. signed a lease agreement in early 2008 for property in Beaver County to develop geothermal energy projects. A consulting firm reported the area to have sufficient thermal resources to provide 200 megawatts of energy, which is enough to power roughly 200,000 homes. The agreement provided Raser Technologies the rights to the geothermal resources and certain surface rights for the construction of wells, piping, power plants and transmission lines. Shortly after signing the leases. Later in 2008, Raser Technologies held a groundbreaking for its geothermal plant in Beaver County – the first new geothermal facility in the state in over two decades. The facility generates 11 megawatts, enough to power roughly 9,000 homes.⁵
